Report of the supervisory board

The accountability and responsibilities of Simavi’s supervisory board are described in the organisation’s Declaration of Accountability (see https://simavi.nl/en/governance).

About the supervisory board

• Throughout the year the supervisory board and the management team operated entirely according to the declaration’s rules and intent.
• The supervisory board is the managing director’s employer and supervisor and acts as her adviser. The board itself has no managerial or operational responsibilities.
• The supervisory board members are recruited according to pre-agreed profiles to ensure the board’s composition encompasses diverse areas of expertise. Vacancies are publicly advertised.
• The supervisory board appoints new board members. The supervisory board may involve the managing director in the assessment and selection procedure.

2021 in review

The past year was again a challenging year for Simavi. With the COVID-19 pandemic still going on, the organisation adapted once more to new situations. Throughout the year the pandemic was a recurring subject during the supervisory board meetings, with a focus on the health and well-being of Simavi employees and partners, the operational side of the Simavi programmes and the possible longer-term funding consequences. The supervisory board members emphasized the need to offer employees support when working from home and to stimulate a sense of togetherness within the organisation in creative ways.

The Simavi organisation and its partners have proven to be very resilient. The team kept Simavi’s programmes running as well as possible and met the challenge of developing the new tools and working methods needed to hit the ground running in 2022 with considerable zeal.

Promoted by global challenges in a vastly changing world, in 2021 Simavi initiated a strategic review process to reconsider and redefine its key added value in international development cooperation. The outcome is a renewed strategic plan for 2022-2025 which focuses on its core expertise area: women and girls’ human rights to water and sanitation. In summary, the strategic plan outlines three crucial elements Simavi will focus on going forward. First, Simavi acknowledges the powerful role of women and girls as key drivers of change and will actively ensure they can take up this role. Women and girls need to participate actively, freely and meaningfully, be equally included in decision-making, and be heard and respected at all levels of WASH governance. Second, the impact of climate change causes further marginalisation of girls and women. Simavi believes access for women and girls to sustainable water and sanitation services should be at the heart of the struggle for climate justice. And lastly, within the international development sector there is a growing global movement to Shift the Power. It is a call to redistribute power and resources to the people who are deprived of their human rights. Simavi will further invest in leadership courses and local actors. The focus of Simavi’s programmes will be even more on supporting context-driven community engagement through partners who work with grassroots women and girl-led initiatives. This approach is key to authentic and lasting social change and transformation.

Simavi has also closely reviewed its Theory of Change and, with input from the supervisory board and many other stakeholders, has outlined the way forward for the next few years. Simavi’s work will be informed by three guiding principles: social justice, feminist leadership and climate justice. These principles are both a means and a goal. They represent the values and approaches that guide Simavi’s work while it is also necessary to embed these principles deeper into society and decision-making. Simavi will focus on low resource countries and regions in Africa and Asia where the human rights to water and sanitation for women and girls are most at risk. Two mutually reinforcing intervention strategies will be implemented: influencing and collaborating. These strategies fit Simavi’s role, position and expertise in the international development sector and help to create an enabling environment in which crucial voices, opinions and demands are heard.

The supervisory board is confident that Simavi is ready for the next level, with the refined strategy and Theory of Change in place and the strong determination to Shift the Power to local ownership in the coming years.

Evaluation of the managing director

In December 2021 Simavi’s managing director Ariette Brouwer announced her departure from Simavi after nine years. The supervisory board wishes to express their appreciation to Ariette for her leadership and hard work over these years. Especially during the last two years Ariette has shown strong resolve and an unwavering commitment during the challenging circumstances of the COVID-19 pandemic. It has been a great pleasure working with Ariette and the board wishes her much success in her future endeavours. In the mean time the supervisory board has selected and appointed her successor, mrs. Deneke van der Wijk. Her appointment takes effect on June 15, 2022.

Audit committee

The audit committee convened four times in 2021. Meetings took place about two weeks before the regular supervisory board meetings. Simavi’s managing director and director of finance and operations also attended. Topics included the annual budget and forecasts, the internal financial reports and annual accounts, the auditor’s report and the governance structure. The external auditor also participated in the discussions of the annual accounts and the auditor’s report.

Self-evaluation of the supervisory board

In line with Simavi’s governance code, the supervisory board annually evaluates its performance. In 2021 it was decided to combine the evaluation with a session on team dynamics including a DISC personality test. In the end it was decided to focus this evaluation solely on the team dynamics and the DISC personality tests. The overall self-evaluation is therefore rescheduled for 2022.

Recognition

In 2021 Simavi and its partners operated under difficult circumstances due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic. The supervisory board greatly appreciates the commitment and perseverance shown by Simavi’s volunteers, employees and management team throughout the year. The supervisory board especially thanks Simavi’s in-country partners for their cooperation and impactful work on the ground, and expresses its appreciation for the strong relations with the organisation’s Dutch and international stakeholders.

Looking forward to 2022 and beyond, the supervisory board has confidence that the Simavi team will find new and effective ways to achieve our common purpose: powerful women, healthy societies.
